

WATSON SUBMITS
PROGRAM FOR WAR
DEBTS REVISION

First Concrete Proposal of Its Kind Presented to The World

3 PROPOSALS ARE GIVEN

Suggests Reduction on Basis of Powers' Capacity to Pay

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—First concrete proposal for a complete revision of inter-governmental war debts was proposed to the world through International News Service today by Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate and an outstanding foe of cancellation.

The Watson program consists of three proposals:

1. Reduction of the war debts owed by European powers to the United States on a basis of their capacity to pay without undue burden.
2. Proportionate slashing of the reparations claimed by the allied powers from Germany.
3. A ten-year naval holiday during which all new construction will be banned, or a 25 per cent cut in all standing navies, based on the ratios established by the London Naval Conference, to take effect at once.

Watson holds, as does Senator Borah, that reconsideration of inter-governmental war debts is lined with European disarmament as a fundamental essential for the preservation of world peace and the restoration of prosperity.

In announcing his plan Senator Watson emphasized it represented only his own personal views. His proposals are not to be associated as coming from the President or the administration, he warned. He has conferred with the President on the subject, however, during the past week.

Because of his powerful position in the Republican party and the Senate, and the fact that he is one of the major leaders of the anti-war coalition bloc and an old league of nations ir-reconcilable, Watson's declaration was received in Congressional circles as of the utmost significance.

"I favor scaling down the debts owed the United States by foreign nations on a basis of their capacity to pay," Senator Watson said, "provided all the interested nations will agree to reduce the reparations owed them by Germany and at the same time either to build no more war vessels of any kind for a period of ten years or else to reduce their present naval strength."

"I am not in favor of the entire cancellation of the debt, because our people have a right to expect Europe to bear a fair share of the cost of the war. The agreement I propose would allow Europe, through its savings in military expenditures, to pay that share."

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Coleman
Dies in Hahnemann Hospital

At the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, this morning at 5.15, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Coleman (nee Wheeler), widow of John W. Coleman, died.

The Bristol woman, who resided at 111 Radcliffe street, had been ill since Sunday, and had been a hospital patient for two days. She was 65 years of age.

Born in Bensalem Township the late Mrs. Coleman spent practically her entire lifetime in Bristol borough. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Helen Fitzgerald; two grandchildren, Anne and Jack Fitzgerald; four sisters, and two brothers.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Fire Damages Bungalow
On Excelsior Ave., Croydon

CROYDON, Oct. 10.—Fire early this morning completely gutted the interior of the bungalow of John Losker, Excelsior avenue, east of State Road.

The blaze was discovered at about three o'clock and Croydon firemen called. The outside of the building was also damaged. No idea as to the origin of the fire could be obtained.

HAS OPERATION

Mrs. Mathew Corning, of Market street, was operated on Wednesday afternoon for appendicitis. She is confined in Dr. Wagner's hospital, and is doing nicely.

VISITING HERE

George A. Sheppard, a former resident here, is spending some time as the guest of James Guy, Pond street.

"STOP MY AD!"

"I could have sold a dozen bucket-a-day stoves," says Charles Spezzano, who advertised one for sale in the Courier.

"Five people called at our house and many more telephoned to inquire about the stove."

MORE PILOTS IN U. S.
THAN IN FIVE POWERS

Other Important Air Groups
Much Smaller Than In This Country

By Edward B. Lockett
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
Article No. 2

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Back of the fighting flying corps, out of the military picture but nevertheless a powerful air power factor, the United States has today more airplane pilots than have the five other important air powers combined.

There are 16,709 civilian pilots in the United States, according to figures held authentic by government officials. The British empire, ranking second, lists 3,427 pilots. Russia has 2,106, Germany 902, France 888, Japan 659, and Italy 613.

These pilots are not trained combat fliers. They are, however, men to whom flying is not new. They are men who have passed rigid flying tests under commerce department air regulations, who can fly an airplane, transport goods and personnel by air.

Army officials regard the civilian pilots as an important reserve in time of war. They pointed out that replacements were steadily necessary under wartime conditions, and that the United States would have a broad, fertile field to draw fighting pilots from should war come. A few Army pilots, they declared, could "do wonders" with a group of men already familiar with flying.

Under war conditions, statistics revealed, these pilots would be allocated to 175 training centers throughout the country, and put through a rigid course in combat flying. The important advantage of their flying experience, it was pointed out, would be the fact that much of the elementary training which in "green men" takes up the longer portion of a combat flying course, could be dispensed with.

Great Britain would have more training points for her 3,427 civilian centers than would America, however, according to figures. She could start operations immediately at 208 points.

Russia, with all her expanse of territory and in the midst of an air expansion program, has today but 51 centers where combat flying training could be started immediately. France has 26, Italy 29, Japan 15 and Germany 12.

France would have a distinct advantage in the air in case of war as a result of her overwhelmingly large active air corps, but the United States has 19,235 civil airplanes which could be used in some connection, immediately. Against this there are British figures of 2,670 planes, while France has but 1,320 registered civil planes, Italy 750, Germany 746, Russia 490 and Japan 360.

If the necessity arose for building combat airplanes speedily France would step ahead in this field, with a production capacity of 200 planes a month. Great Britain's emergency capacity for building fighting airplanes is estimated at 150 a month, Italy ranking third with an 80 plane monthly capacity.

The United States could today start making fighting planes at the rate of 75 a month. Russia could build 60 a month, Japan 60, while Germany, blocked in military aviation through post-war treaties, could not build a single plane the first month. She would have to convert civil airplane factories into military production first.

410 BUSHELS TO AN ACRE

For the first time since the establishment of the 400-Bushel Club system among the potato growers of the State, the Green Mountain variety succeeded in breaking into the ranks among the Bucks county growers.

Heretofore a majority of the Bucks county farmers who succeeded in gaining a membership into this organization by virtue of raising 400 or more bushels to the acre planted the Russet variety. A number of the others planted Cobblers. Green Mountain for some reason failed to produce the required amount of potatoes to enable the growers to gain club membership.

This year, however, one Bucks county farmer, D. Clifford Yerkes, of Davisville, succeeded in gaining membership to the club with his Green Mountain planting. According to the report submitted by County Agent William F. Greenawalt, Mr. Yerkes' yield was 410 bushels to the acre.

This yield was produced in a field of 12 acres. He planted 16 bushels of seed to the acre on May 1 and on September 15 it was noted that the vines had died. The potatoes, the report continues, were planted to a depth of two inches with a planter. Two years ago this same field was planted with potatoes, but last year Mr. Yerkes had a crop of wheat in it.

The ground was plowed this Spring to an approximate depth of 9 inches. This was followed by discing. Approximately 10 tons of manure to the acre was applied late last Winter.

After having planted the seed Mr. Yerkes cultivated the field four times and put the weeder in use five times. The vines were sprayed 10 times. Mr. Yerkes applied a 4-8-7 commercial fertilizer to the soil, having put 1200 pounds to the acre.

Mr. Yerkes is the second Bucks county farmer this Fall to gain membership into the 400-Bushel Club. The first was C. L. Wilkinson of Rushland.

ARRANGE CELEBRATION,
QUAKERTOWN WHITE WAY

Parade to Be Included on Day of Dedication Ceremonies

EVENING OF OCTOBER 15

QUAKERTOWN, Oct. 10.—At the first meeting since the Summer recess of the Quakertown Chamber of Commerce held in the headquarters in the Merchants' National Bank building, plans were presented by a committee of citizens of the town looking toward the dedication of the recently completed municipal electric light system which includes 330 standards and about 20 additional lights. This system was erected by funds from the municipal electric light plant surplus and cost approximately $60,000.

The celebration is planned for the evening of October 15, at which time a parade will be held over the principal streets of the town. The two town bands and high school band, fraternal organizations, Boy Scouts, American Legion, fire department, school children, and other organizations and floats will participate. A. W. Treffinger has been named chief marshal and he will have a number of aides.

While the event will lay stress principally on the completion of the light system, attention will also be called to the completed civic program in Quakertown the last four years totaling nearly $1,000,000. This includes a $200,000 high school, a hospital costing a like amount, and a municipal sewer system costing nearly $400,000.

James M. Parker, superintendent of the municipal electric light plant, will be a guest of honor. Members of the school board and Borough Council will also occupy the platform. A concert by the high school orchestra following the parade, and addresses by prominent local persons will conclude the program which will be held in front of the Merchants' National Bank building.

Alfred S. Johnson, president of the chamber of commerce, was named chairman of the committee in charge of the affair. He will have as aides Howard R. Moyer, Charles S. Ort, Chief Burgess Victor Smith, J. Wilmer Shaw, Milton Weiss and several others.

Nominations for chamber of commerce officers was deferred until the November meeting. County Commissioner Clarence Benner spoke briefly, in which he said he is using his influence for road improvement in upper Bucks County, and that among the first roads which will likely be improved in the upper end is the old Doylestown road to Church Hill.

CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM
CHARGE IN MANY ARRESTS

44 Indictments for Murder Are

Strike Trouble

WHOLESALE EVICTIONS

By C. Edward Morris
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1931, by I. N. S.)

HARLAN, Ky., Oct. 10.—On either side of the entrance to the principal hotel here is fastened a gilt-lettered, glass-covered sign bearing the legend: "Welcome, Coal Operators!"

"They ought to take those signs down," said a miner to the writer.

"And nail one of them over Judge Jones' door and the other over Sheriff Blair's."

The man spoke through clenched teeth, without smiling, adding almost as if he were thinking aloud:

"Hell's going to pop wide open in Harlan one of these days. Don't forget it's less than eleven years since armed miners shot it out with State Troopers not so far from here before the Federal troops could get here."

The day before this miner had been released from the Harlan County jail after 54 days' imprisonment. He had been charged with criminal syndicalism and held under a $20,000 bond which his financially crippled union could not post for almost two months.

"The only ground for my arrest," he said, with quiet bitterness, "was that I had a copy of the 'Daily Worker' in my possession."

Space limits prohibit detailed discussion of the welter of charges and countercharges of lawlessness and intimidation made by both miners and mine owners in Harlan County, which produces 23 per cent of Kentucky's coal and employs 18 per cent of the State's miners.

The facts are that since an attempt was begun, first by the United Mine Workers of America and later by the "Red" National Miners Union and the I. W. W., to organize the miners of the region, savage civil war has been waged.

Since last May this struggle has resulted in a dozen deaths. There have been more than 100 arrests, many of them on charges of criminal syndicalism. Forty-four indictments for murder have been found. A miners' soup kitchen has been dynamited. Mine tipplers have been burned, commissaries looted.

Two reporters seeking to learn the truth of the situation have been shot in the leg. Known miners' sympathizers have been beaten up.

There have been wholesale evictions and dismissals of strikers. Armed bands have roamed the hills, striking terror into the hearts of the county's inhabitants.

There is a temporary lull just now in the bitter class war. But Harlan County remains a dangerously smoldering volcano.

Harlan County was the only place the writer found in a 3,000-mile tour through the soft coal regions of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio, where miners were clearly afraid to voice their grievances to a stranger until thoroughly satisfied that he was not a "stool" for the "bosses."

When they did open up, their tales of injustice, if eventually proven true, indicate that conditions in Harlan are as bad as they were in mediaeval England.

The two county officials whom the miners unanimously accuse of being overly friendly to the operators are Circuit Judge D. C. Jones and Sheriff J. H. Blair.

Blair was "resting somewhere outside Kentucky" when an International News Service reporter visited Harlan. But Judge Jones came to the hotel to talk with the reporter, accompanied by two deputy sheriffs whose side-arms were much in evidence.

There was no smile as he said:

"The miner will always grunt, no matter what he gets. It's his nature. As far as these trouble makers here are concerned, both them and we

JUDGE TELLS OF DEPRESSION AND
THE SCOUT DRIVE

Hon. Hiram H. Keller Says
The Work Must Go On

TO BENEFIT THE YOUNG

Other Leaders Speak at Dinner
Given in Doylestown

The drive to raise a fund of $50,000 to carry forward the work of the Boy Scouts of Bucks County for the next two year period was officially launched at the dinner given by Judge Hiram H. Keller, to 200 leading business men of Bucks County, last night, in Doylestown. The spirit of optimism prevailed all through the meeting, and the quotas were accepted by each community, the men left with the determination that they would return to their homes and bring the campaign in their respective communities to a successful completion at once.

Scout William Adam, Troop No. 1, Riegelsville, made a strong appeal to the workers to do their utmost to raise the funds to continue Scouting.

Judge Keller in commenting upon Scout work of Bucks County had the following to say:

"It is more encouraging to see this very large representation of the leaders of our county and no doubt when you first learned that the executive committee was going to carry on this campaign you wondered what caused this action on the part of the committee at a time such as this."

"We hear it and no doubt you hear it. They say that it is the wrong time to have a drive for Boy Scouts. This question was thoroughly discussed and at last we felt that with some assistance on the part of the committee and on the part of the men interested in the Scout movement, throughout the county, we would be able to raise the sum we are now seeking."

"We are going to provide for the needy and poor but poverty is only temporary and the aid you render to them is only called for during a period of a depression such as we are now going through. We must not forget the young people who are going to be affected by it and who will be our leaders in the future. It is these young boys in whom we are interested and we must now carry on the work in which we have been engaged during the last five years."

"I only want to say what I said at a recent meeting of the executive committee that two years ago we went to our people with a similar proposition upon a mere promise of what we expected to accomplish. This year we go back to the people with not only a promise but we can show performance. We are in position to do for every penny that was given to us for the bene-money was not wasted in overhead, but it went where it should."

We say to you workers when you go out, that you can assure the people whom you solicit that this organization is economically managed with one problem in view—to give the boys the most that we can for the money that we have."

President Thomas B. Stockham was introduced and said in part:

"I don't want to take up much of the time to discuss scouting because I know that there are other interesting and fine messages for us to follow. I have been making a comparison. As you know my home town is in Morrisville, which is just across the river from Trenton, and we naturally look across the river to see just what Trenton Scouts are doing in their progress with their funds. I learned from my observation and comparison that our area is three times that of their county, but we have but one-half the population of that county. We have 50 per cent more Scouts and we are the only council with "A" rating. With this attainment we can feel proud, considering that we have reached this with the same amount of money as the Trenton Council, and the Scout Executive with his two assistants are rendering a wonderful service for the money that is received from the county for the benefit of Scouting and this is an asset to any county."

"I never knew a thing about Scouting until I became the president of this organization and became actively engaged in this work, but like many of you men, I learned many things. I want to comment upon the interest of many of the men in this County and upon the work they have done for the welfare of the boyhood of Bucks County. It is a real treat to go to the camp and see forty or fifty of the boys gathered there on Saturday or Sunday and feel that they are getting something out of their training course."

The guest of honor, Honorable Charles Edwin Fox, former district attorney of Philadelphia, was introduced and spoke as follows:

"The Scouting Organization is in its 22nd year and it was as hard then as it is now to collect funds with which to develop this movement. When this Organization was started (Continued on Page 4)

DAREDEVIL PEDESTRIANS

Shades of Jonathan Swift! Two centuries after the immortal English satirist penned his celebrated "Modest Proposal," he has in a London magistrate a worthy imitator.

Swift's "Modest Proposal" suggested that the prevailing food shortage in Ireland would be immeasurably relieved if babies were fattened for human consumption. With a wealth of argument he demonstrated the immense advantages, hygienic, social and economic, which would result from the cannibalistic practice.

The magistrate's modest proposal is that "the pedestrian who is injured should be fined" and "if he is killed, the cost of any inquiry should be paid out of his goods."

He was not defending the careless or reckless motorist nor placing full responsibility for traffic accidents upon the pedestrian. His point is that the average walker places too much confidence in and too much responsibility on the man at the wheel. The attitude of "hit me if you dare" and "the car must stop for me," sends many pedestrians to the hospital or morgue.

When the pedestrian is brought to realize that in the last resort he is responsible, in fact if not in law, for his own safety there can be no doubt that the number of traffic accidents will drop. And since nearly every pedestrian has a dual personality, as pedestrian and as motorist, he might not in the long run be at a disadvantage.

Many a young hopeful expects his father to give him a start in life and then keep on furnishing the motive power.

Greatness is just a matter of range. The ignorant man knows his back yard better than anybody else.

The owner of the Czarina rubies, Prince Murinov, loses his life defending them from a Russian revolutionary mob. Ten years later Frank Severn goes to Russia, finds the gems and entrusts them to Federoff, who disappears.

Severn returns to his country place in England and is kidnapped. His friend, Jim Wynter, tries in vain to save him.

Katharine Faring, once a celebrated young violinist, has had to give up her career, because of an injury. Lester Malin tries to trap her into accepting his attentions by falsely accusing her of stealing a necklace. Wynter overhears Malin's threat and goes to Katharine's flat, there to await the man's arrival.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XII

She went out into the little hall, opened the door. Malin stood there, a confident smile on the heavy, sensual face. She looked at him in cold silence.

"Aren't you going to ask me in? We can hardly talk here—about so delicate and private a matter," he said blandly.

"Have you come to repeat your lie?" she asked contemptuously.

"Come, my dear, no need to quarrel. You know perfectly well that you left the children's flat with that missing necklace in your bag."

"Where, of course, I never put it—as who should know better than you?" Katharine flashed out.

He gave a faint shrug. "Anyway, you admit that it is in your possession. I fancy Mrs. Grayson will need a lot of convincing that her property came to be in your bag without your knowing anything about it!" he said with a little evil laugh. "Come, my dear, no harm's done so far. Think of me as a friend. I'm not such a bad sort, and even though you were a little spiteful tonight, I bear no malice."

Malin's words ended abruptly and his jaw dropped. He had seen the floor of a room slowly open, saw the grim face of the last man he had expected to find there.

'OLITE BLACKMAIL

"What's the idea, Malin? Polite blackmail?"

And Wynter strode out into the hall to Malin's manifest uneasiness. "Blackmail! How dare you—!" began Malin, trying to brazen it out.

"Miss Faring," said Wynter, evenly, "I wish you'd go into that room or two minutes while I deal with his—gentleman."

And then, as the door closed after her:

"Well, my man, I give you just ten seconds to eat your poisonous slander and admit it was all a damnable plot of your own devising. Ten seconds, Malin!"

"Admission be damned! I tell you the stole—"

The look on Wynter's face checked his further words. Malin saw the glow coming. He backed hastily and flung up his hands. But Wynter's fist smashed through his guard and took him full on the mouth. Malin ran to flesh; he went down heavily.

"Just what I've been wanting to do ever since I knew of this ugly game of yours," remarked Wynter, a smile of satisfaction on his face. "Now get up and clear out!"

Slowly Malin stumbled to his feet, still rattled by the blow, his lip was cut and swollen. His eyes rested in venomous hatred on Wynter.

"You shall pay for this and so shall she!" he whispered furiously.

Wynter laughed. "Aren't you rather asking for more trouble? You see, I happened to be on the balcony and overheard your telephone message. Your words to Miss Faring, if I were to make them public, would have rather an ugly sound—about keeping silent as to the alleged theft—on terms. I fancy my word would be as good as yours, Malin.

"Come, I want your explanation—quick! And it's got to be a darned good explanation, my man!" Wynter clicked out.

Almost as Malin glanced round, as if to make sure that he could open the door in a hurry if necessary, Wynter had moved forward, stood significantly with his back to the door. Malin eyed him with palpably growing nervousness.

"I—I can't discuss this lady's private affairs before others," Katharine's cool, contemptuous voice broke in.

"Mr. Wynter happens to know already every word you said to me on the telephone."

"Then he knows you walked off with the necklace," Wynter paused meaningly. "If you should be fool enough to repeat a slander, which no one will believe, I shall go to the trouble of thrashing you in public—and I'll insure that no decent man or woman will want to be seen speaking to you. That's all. Now clear out," he added contemptuously.

DELIGHTED

And Malin went.

A door behind Wynter opened, and the little old countess' face appeared, wreathed in smiles, and she clapped her hands delightedly.

"Exit Malin!" remarked Wynter with a cheerful grin. "He's hating me pretty luridly, of course—which I can endure with calmness—but he's counted out, and is fully alive to that fact. I know that Milly regards Malin as pretty poisonous, and when I take back her necklace and she hears the exact story—" He broke off with a laugh. "Well, anyway, you needn't give another minute's worry to it, Miss Faring."

She drew a deep breath. "I don't know how to thank you—or what I should have done without you," Katharine said with a rather tremulous smile. "I was so desperately frightened when I found that necklace in my handbag."

"Of course, Malin counted on that."

"I had the sudden helpless feeling of being in a trap. If people should refuse to believe my story—" For a moment her voice was not quite steady.

"Oh, nonsense!" he said lightly. "But, of course, they would have believed you. I know I can answer for Milly Grayson." He paused. Then: "You know it was news to me, what you told me at the children's about your career. Until then I hadn't heard of you. I'd like just to tell you how terribly sorry I am," he said very sympathetically.

For a moment with his words a poignant memory troubled the dark eyes.

"No, life hasn't been too kind or fair to me," she said, with a sudden tinge of bitterness unusual in her. He saw the traces on her wrist of those injuries that had robbed the sensitive, flexible fingers of their old magic touch. "Twice in my life I've lost everything. The Revolution in Russia swallowed up all we had, shortened my mother's life . . . and then afterwards in a moment my career went. To know I should never play again! And when that went everything went—dreams, ambitions, everything! A little hour of success—and now my name already forgotten!"

She broke off abruptly, as if half-ashamed of the sudden outburst. She mustn't whine about her trouble—she who had always despised people who could not take bad luck without grizzling.

Only she was feeling in rather a desperate mood. Of course, as Katharine told herself impatiently, she had been a fool to be tempted to play roulette that night—only she had been lucky so often in the past, when good luck did not much matter. She should have known that, now when it did matter supremely, luck would have turned against her.

HOPE

But she had pluck. And her pluck asserted itself now against that black mood. Something would turn up—must turn up!

Had Katharine not known it, the thoughts of the man facing her in the little room were following the lines of her own just then.

That she was desperately hard up did not need much divining on Wynter's part—this girl whose career had been

GAME WITH LANGHORNE TRIUMPH FOR BRISTOL

(By Leon Schiffer)

Fighting an uphill battle against tremendous odds, Bristol High's football eleven succeeded in breaking through Langhorne's strong defense twice yesterday afternoon on the latter's gridiron to wrest victory from the hands of Coach Beck's men. The final score was 12 to 7.

The features of the game were a spectacular 30 yard end run by Gaffney, of Bristol; and a bullet-like pass covering a distance of 35 yards from Leighton to Dougherty.

Dougherty, Britton, Bornice and Pico starred for the invaders on the offense, and it was chiefly due to this quartet that victor was snatched in the last six minutes of play from the hands of Coach Beck's men.

Davis and Adams starred for Langhorne.

Although both teams were evenly matched, Langhorne showed a more intensive fighting spirit. It was not until the beginning of the second half that the "big gray" snapped out of its daze and began to show form.

The first period opened with Davis, of Langhorne, kicking off to Leighton, who returned 19 yards, being downed on Bristol's 30 yard line. An exchange of punts between Davis and Leighton gave Bristol possession of the ball on its own 35 yard line. On the next play Langhorne gained 5 yards, but Langhorne received the benefit of a 15 yard penalty for using hands. Leighton then attempted to punt out of danger, but his kick was blocked and Christine, of Langhorne, recovered on Bristol's 10 yard line. After several line bucks which had gained no yardage, Adams passed to Davis, who scored. Adams converted the extra point on a line buck. Period ended with the ball on Langhorne's 25 yard line and in Bristol's possession.

The second canto opened with Bristol starting a terrific onslaught, but Langhorne refused to give way. A grounded pass over the end zone by Leighton to Esposito gave Langhorne possession of the ball on their own 20 yard line. Davis kicked, Bristol gaining possession on their own 45 yard line. Leighton then heaved a bullet-like pass covering a distance of 35 yards to Dougherty, who advanced the pigskin to Langhorne's 3 yard line. Bornice scored on a fake reverse. Try for extra point failed. Half ended with ball on Langhorne's 35 yard line, in the Cardinal and Gray's possession.

The third period saw both teams battling up and down the field with neither eleven scoring.

The fourth stanza saw Bristol unleashing its attack with the ferocity of a tornado. Gaining possession of the pigskin on their 20 yard line, the invaders, with Pico and Bornice bearing the brunt of the attack, started their long march down the field which terminated only after Pico had dived over Davis' head for Bristol's second tally and the winning touchdown of the game. The try for extra point failed.

The remainder of the game saw Langhorne trying desperately to score but to no avail.

Next week the local boys play Doylestown at home.

Line-up:

BRISTOL'S OPPOSITION TO BE NORTH PHILLIES

The Bristol A. A. football team will try for its third consecutive victory on Sullivan's field tomorrow, meeting the strong North Phillies team.

Last season the two teams met and Bristol won by the score of 12-0. A rally in the last quarter after the Phillies had battled them evenly for three quarters of the game netted the local win.

Last Sunday the A's took the Fern Rock eleven into camp by a 12-6 score which looks very good as the Roebeling A. A. team could only score once against the Rocks, beating them 6-0.

Coach Corrigan is undecided as to whom he will put in the starting line-up but before the fray is over every man will be given a chance to show their ability on the gridiron.

Game will begin promptly at three o'clock.

Free Installation of Radios for Organizations

Musical organizations of the vicinity can have installed in their meeting halls, free of charge, a brand-new Philco radio over which they can listen to the first broadcast of Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra on Monday, October 12, it was announced today by the Philco dealer in this territory, Mr. Wooley, of the Bristol Radio Shop.

The installation will be made by this Philco dealer, who will put the set in only for accredited organizations such as school music clubs, community orchestras and bands, church orchestras and recognized glee clubs and choral societies.

"This is part of a great nationwide educational movement put under way by Philco, sponsors of the Philadelphia Orchestra broadcasts. Philco, which originally brought Stokowski and his orchestra to the microphone, is staging this year the greatest musical spectacle ever put on the air, and is anxious for the greatest number of people possible to hear it.

"Nothing like it has ever been done. In the first place, the series centers about one of the greatest orchestras and greatest conductors in the world. In the second, the series will form a sweeping history of music, including the greatest masterpieces ever written, so that even though a listener knows nothing of music at the beginning, by the end of the series he will have a clear idea of its development through the centuries.

"Then, each of the concerts will broadcast direct from the stage of the famous Academy of Music in Philadelphia, with a regular concert audience present. Each will be an hour and three quarters in length. The listener will hear the concert just as though he were present in person."

The largest network ever assembled for a symphony concert will carry the program, he said.

Immediate application to the nearest Philco dealer is necessary in order that the set can be installed in time for the concert, it was pointed out. Arrangements for hundreds of such "radio loans" have already been made throughout the country.

Judge Tells of Depression And the Scout Drive

In Philadelphia, four men were the organizers of a campaign. All of these men were affiliated with the crime problem in their public contact.

This evening I will endeavor to give you what I consider the plain elements in Scout work as I have been able to gather from twenty-one and a half years' experience. We engage a lot of our time in solving problems in the preventive way. Prevention in disease, etc., but we have not done a single thing and I think both judges and my friends will agree that we have done precious little in this country in the line of crime prevention.

If we can do something in this line, we will then have completed a job. I have been very much interested in this work in Philadelphia County. What was the population of our penal institutions in the last ten years? Of all the inmates in such institutions, 22% were under the age of 21 years and over the age of 16. This fact is a challenge not only in Bucks County, but is a situation that repeats itself all over the universe.

"During the last ten years, I dare say that I have been in touch with 2,500 juvenile delinquents and in that number only seven of them were Boy Scouts that were brought into Juvenile Court. Duffy was quite a personal friend of mine and at one time it was suggested to me that we have the inmates of the Eastern Penitentiary carry on a campaign. I called the warden on the telephone and he communicated me with a prisoner who was interested in Boy Scouts, Mickey Duffy. When asked if he would take charge of this campaign, he said: 'I will be glad to take charge of this campaign in the Penitentiary. I approve of the Boy Scouts because I think that if a good many of us here had had that early training, we would not be here. What is Scouting but a form of recreation. The average boy's intention is not to violate any statute, but is simply the use of energy that makes him want to be a Boy Scout, and it is that fact above all others.'

"While in charge of a troop of Scouts in Glen Mills, a reformatory institution to which judges east of Altoona commit boys, we had an occasion on which we took them to Atlantic City, where they occupied the top floor of one of the hotels. When we left them there, I reminded them that now was the time for them to break away if that was their intention. With some hesitations, I returned to the hotel the next morning, and found all of them there. On this same occasion we left these boys alone and made arrangements that they would meet us at the station. When the train was due, all of the boys were there and no one had attempted an escape. Let us refer to the other side of this question. This is not only a reformatory movement. In this day of immorality, and atheism, we have a job to keep the normal boy normal, clean and ambitious. Theodore Roosevelt said a short time before his death: 'There is so much in this country done for the bad boy, that there is a great number of good boys going bad.'

Frigitare Motor Truck Crosses the Continent

Loaded with six tons of California fruit and other perishable foods, a Frigitare equipped motor truck recently crossed the continent in four days and 21 hours of actual running time, arriving in New York with its entire cargo in first class condition. In the Arizona desert, where a maximum of 125 degrees was encountered, the refrigerated compartment maintained a constant temperature below 45 degrees.

Aside from its significance in opening a new field of transportation for motor trucks, the record smashing run furnishes abundant proof of the absolute dependability of modern electric refrigeration equipment, according to C. W. Winter local Frigitare dealer.

"In its punishing drive across the continent the heavily loaded truck encountered all sorts of rough roads and the equipment was required to operate in normal fashion at varied altitudes and under rapidly changing temperatures. Once this temperature actually varied 75 degrees in less than twenty-four hours.

"Although not expected to meet the rough usage encountered on a 3200 mile trip across the continent, the household Frigitare is so designed that it will give even, dependable refrigeration under all conditions."

The combined length of the General Motors truck and trailer which made the transcontinental run was 32 feet. The combination was mounted upon 22 wheels. An auxiliary gasoline engine provided the power which operated the refrigerating equipment.

Ben B. Golden, former Commonwealth attorney, who is associated with Senator J. M. Robison in the defense of many of those arrested in Harlan County had this to say when the writer saw him in Pineville:

"The worst that has been said about conditions in Harlan is true. The miners have been hounded, terrorized, exploited and persecuted simply because they demanded the right to unionize. Their civil rights have been shamefully disregarded in a flagrant way that is a disgrace to civilization."
